The Management of UN Peacekeeping: Coordination, Learning, and Leadership in Peace Operations

Julian Junk, Francesco Mancini, Wolfgang Seibel, and Till Blume, editors

This groundbreaking book brings the insights of organization and public administration theories to the analysis and enhancement of complex peace operations. Focusing on three essential and interrelated aspects of organizations—coordination, learning, and leadership—the authors bridge the gap between research on UN peacekeeping and the realities confronted both in the office and in the field.

Julian Junk is research fellow at both the Peace Research Institute Frankfurt and the Goethe University of Frankfurt. Francesco Mancini is assistant dean and visiting associate professor at the National University of Singapore's Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy. Wolfgang Seibel is professor of politics and public administration at the University of Konstanz. Till Blume serves on the staff of the German Federal Foreign Office.

Evolving Patterns of Peacekeeping: International Cooperation at Work

Hikaru Yamashita

"This well-written book contains valuable data and analysis on patterns of peacekeeping, with case studies that illustrate the actual shifts that are taking place." —Lisa Schirch, Eastern Mennonite University

Though historically the term peacekeeping has essentially been shorthand for UN peacekeeping, recent years have seen a proliferation of actors and initiatives in a shift to global peacekeeping cooperation. Hikaru Yamashita explores the motivations behind this development, what forms it is taking, and what it means for the international community. His comprehensive account of peacekeeping cooperation offers both an original theoretical framework and rich case studies drawn from Afghanistan, Congo, Macedonia, and Sudan.

Hikaru Yamashita heads the Government and Law Division in the Security Studies Department of Japan's National Institute for Defense Studies.

CONTENTS: What Is Global Peacekeeping Cooperation? Contexts and Actors. Understanding Peacekeeping Cooperation. Operational Collaboration: Sudan and Congo. Joint Decisionmaking: Macedonia, Afghanistan, and Congo. Capacity-Building Assistance and

Connecting Peace, Justice, and Reconciliation

Elisabeth Porter

“An overdue and thoughtful articulation of the complex inter-relationship [among] peace, working for justice, and building postconflict reconciliation.... As an undergraduate text in peace and conflict studies, this book serves an important purpose.”

—Jeremy A. Rinker, Peace & Change

“Porter puts forward important and often complex topics in a straightforward and accessible way.... This book makes a major contribution to the IR literature in general, as well as to discussions of postconflict transformation, DDR and its challenges, and human, including feminist, security.” —Joyce P. Kaufman, Whittier College

Can postconflict states achieve both peace and justice as they deal with a traumatic past? What role does reconciliation play in healing wounds, building trust, and rectifying injustices? This provocative book, incorporating the frameworks of both peace/conflict studies and transitional justice, explores the core challenges that war-torn states confront once the violence has ended.

The book is organized around a series of questions, each one the subject of a chapter, with each chapter presenting a wide range of practical examples and case studies. The author also stakes out a position on each question, encouraging readers to evaluate and respond to ideas, practices, and strategies. Narratives are a notable feature of the work, with the human consequences of war and peace highlighted throughout.

Elisabeth Porter is professor of politics and international relations at the University of South Australia.

CONTENTS: Connecting Peace, Justice, and Reconciliation. Why Are War Narratives Important? What Are the Harms of War? Do Truth Commissions Work? Can Trust Be Built in Divided Societies? What Can Apology and Forgiveness Achieve? Can Compassion Be

Practiced in Postconflict Contexts? What Happens in Reconciliation? Conclusion.

Practical Approaches to Peacebuilding: Putting Theory to Work

Pamina Firchow and Harry Anastasiou, editors

“This well-balanced volume approaches peacebuilding from a variety of important geographical and theoretical directions.... It is a valuable asset for anyone looking for a comprehensive view of the subject.” —Karl DeRouen, University of Alabama

What is sustainable peacebuilding? And what is the relationship between empirical realities and theoretical approaches to the subject? The authors of Practical Approaches to Peacebuilding present a series of case studies from around the world to explore how various peacebuilding theories engage and interact with lived experiences, and also to elaborate useful new theoretical perspectives.

Pamina Firchow is assistant professor of conflict analysis and resolution at George Mason University’s School for Conflict Analysis and Resolution. Harry Anastasiou is professor of international peace and conflict studies and director of the Conflict Resolution Program at Portland State University.

Building States to Build Peace

Charles T. Call with Vanessa Wyeth, editors

"A wide-ranging and enlightening contribution to existing scholarship on post-conflict peacebuilding."

—Åshild Falch,
Journal of Peace Research

How can legitimate and sustainable states best be established in the aftermath of civil wars? And what role should international actors play in supporting the vital process?

Addressing these questions, the authors of Building State to Build Peace explore the core challenges involved in institutionalizing post-conflict states. The combination of thematic chapters and in-depth case studies covers the full range of the most vexing and diverse problems confronting domestic and international actors seeking to build states while building peace.

Charles T. Call is associate professor of international peace and conflict resolution at American University. Vanessa Wyeth is peace and conflict adviser at OECD.

Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration: Theory and Practice

Desmond Molloy

"Molloy offers valuable insights into the practical application of DDR theory within the context of modern conflict and national and human security programs."

—Dean Piedmont,
Countering Violent Extremism Initiative

Disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration, or DDR, has been widely advocated for decades as an essential component of postconflict peacebuilding. But DDR in practice has generated more questions than answers. Does the approach work, contributing to postconflict stabilization and the reintegration of former combatants? Can it work better? What constitutes success? What accounts for failures? Do the potential risks outweigh the potential benefits?

Drawing on his extensive experience in the field, Desmond Molloy considers these questions and more as he traces the evolution of DDR theory and practice from the mid-1980s to the present.

Desmond Molloy is program director in the Myanmar Liaison Office of the Nippon Foundation, where he focuses on the design and management of integrated peacebuilding programs.

Announcing a new series ...

Bradford Studies in Peace Research and Practice

SERIES EDITOR: David J. Francis

EDITORIAL BOARD: P.B. Annan, Neil Cooper, Owen Greene, Caroline Hughes, Fiona Macaulay, and David Potts

We are happy to announce a new book series, Bradford Studies in Peace Research and Practice, hosted by the Department of Peace Studies and International Development at the University of Bradford. The series will offer a cutting-edge, critical interpretation and understanding of contemporary peace, conflict, and global security issues with a particular focus on the nexus of these complex themes.

The series editor and Editorial Board welcome proposals for books that incorporate innovative, practical, and empirical insights—that challenge conventional explanations of peace and conflict issues by providing new thinking and critically engaging with contemporary debates. The scope of the series encompasses the full range of social-science disciplines (including but not limited to peace and conflict research, security studies, political economy, development, international relations, and sociology).

To submit a proposal or discuss a possible project, contact the series editor, David J. Francis, at d.j.francis@bradford.ac.uk.

Faith and Practice in Conflict Resolution: Toward a Multidimensional Approach

Rachel M. Goldberg, editor

“Essential reading.... This book presents what master practitioners have long known, but too rarely acknowledged in writing—that religious and spiritual approaches can support conflict resolution. Equally important, it goes on to explain how.” —Susan Allen, George Mason University

What would the work of conflict resolution look like if practitioners not only recognized that it is impossible for them to be neutral—and that there are dangers in believing otherwise—but also brought their whole selves to the negotiation table?

Focusing on this question, the authors of Faith and Practice in Conflict Resolution introduce the work of pathbreaking individuals who have successfully moved beyond the constraints of the objectivist paradigm to tap into the insights that their spiritual roots, their emotions, and even their bodies can contribute. The book presents an important new framework for whole, multidimensional practice, along with concrete techniques for promoting peace.

Rachel M. Goldberg is assistant professor of conflict studies at DePauw University.

CONTENTS: Faith and Multidimensional Practice in Conflict Resolution—R.M. Goldberg. A Possible Framework for Multidimensional Practice—R.M. Goldberg and B. Blancke. Women at War, Women Building Peace: Challenging Gender Norms

Joyce P. Kaufman and Kristen P. Williams

“[A] clear, insightful, and important text.”

—John Wilson, International Studies Review

During times of civil conflict and war, why do some women turn to militant action while others seek peaceful resolutions? And why does the answer matter? Tackling these questions in their provocative analysis, Joyce Kaufman and Kristen Williams explore the full range of women's responses to armed struggles.

Joyce P. Kaufman is professor of political science at Whittier College. Kristen P.

Williams is professor of political science at Clark University.

Women Building Peace: What They Do, Why It Matters

Sanam Naraghi Anderlini

“Anderlini is uniquely qualified to write about women, peace, and security.... This is an excellent book.”

—Elisabeth Porter,
International Studies Review

“A must-read for anyone engaged in the study or practice of conflict resolution and peacebuilding who wants to know the full story.”

—Donna Ramsey-Marshall,
International Journal on World Peace

How and why do women's contributions matter in peace and security processes? Why should women's activities in this sphere be explored separately from peacebuilding efforts in general?

Decisively answering these questions, Sanam

Anderlini offers a comprehensive, cross-regional analysis of women's peacebuilding initiatives around the world.

Why Peace Processes Fail: Negotiating Insecurity After Civil War

Jasmine-Kim Westendorf

“A well-researched, strongly argued, and stimulating new approach to studying peace in the aftermath of war.”

—Julia Strasheim, Democratization

“An impressive work of academic research that makes insightful recommendations to world leaders in addressing the many internal civil wars of the 21st century. Highly recommended.” —Choice

Why do so many post-civil war societies continue to be characterized by widespread violence and political instability? Or, more succinctly, why do peace processes so often fail to consolidate peace? Addressing this question, Jasmine-Kim Westendorf explores how the international community engages in resolving civil wars—and clarifies why, despite the best of intentions and the investment of significant resources, external actors fail in their reconstruction efforts and even contribute to perpetuating the very conditions of insecurity and conflict that they are trying to alleviate.

Jasmine-Kim Westendorf is lecturer in international relations at La Trobe University.

Strategic Advising in Foreign Assistance: A Practical Guide

Nadia Gerspacher

“This seminal work on strategic advising is long overdue.... Anyone engaged in writing policy, planning, or operationalizing strategic advising efforts needs to read it.” —John M. Gillette, Endgame Solutions

Though advisers to host governments have become an integral part of foreign-assistance efforts in the realms of both development and peace processes, there has been scant information on how they can best achieve their goals. What skills, tools, and attributes do successful advisers need? How can they best share their expertise with their foreign counterparts in ways that build local capacities and contribute to sustainable solutions?

Filling the lacunae, Nadia Gerspacher’s welcome handbook offers practical, step-by-step guidance for any adviser joining an assistance mission tasked with effective and long-lasting local capacity building.

Nadia Gerspacher is director of security sector education at the United States Institute of Peace.

The Police in War: Fighting Insurgency, Terrorism, and Violent Crime

David H. Bayley and Robert M. Perito

"Should be required reading for any government officials contemplating intervention in a failed state or using military intervention to force a regime change."
—Scott A. Pray,
International Criminal Justice Review

"Eminently readable.... This is an important book for practitioners and policy-makers alike."
—David Parker, RUSI Journal

Against the backdrop of a failed US attempts to train police forces in Iraq and Afghanistan, David Bayley and Robert Perito explore the role of the local police as an element of successful peace operations and counter-insurgency campaigns.

Their analysis ranges from the specifics of training to the larger arena of broad institutional reform. Equally practical and grounded in theory, their work offers crucial guidance on the role and training of local police forces that must grapple daily with the challenges of ongoing conflicts.

David H. Bayley is distinguished professor in the School of Criminal Justice at the University at Albany, SUNY. Robert M. Perito is senior program officer at the US Institute of Peace.

Do No Harm: How Aid Can Support Peace—or War

Mary B. Anderson

"Insightful and practical.... Do No Harm makes an important contribution to an ongoing discussion about how outsiders can play a productive role in preventing and resolving violent conflict."
—Ana Grier Cutter, Ethics and International Affairs

"Provide[s] the reader with short but profound examples of how aid has been given in a range of conflict situations.... [Do No Harm] is a well written and a very usable book."
—Journal of Peace Research

Mary Anderson challenges aid agencies to take responsibility for the ways that their assistance affects conflicts.

Anderson cites the experiences of aid providers in war-torn societies around the world to show that international assistance—even when it is effective in saving lives, alleviating suffering, and encouraging sustainable development—too often reinforces divisions among contending groups. But she more importantly offers hopeful evidence of creative programs that point the way to new approaches to aid. Calling for a redesign of assistance programs so that they do no harm while doing their intended good, she argues further that many opportunities exist for aid workers to positively support the processes by which societies disengage from war.

Mary B. Anderson is coauthor of Opting Out of War: Strategies to Prevent Violent Conflict and Rising from the Ashes: Development Strategies in Times of Disaster.

“An invaluable anatomy of the way development aid to Rwanda before the genocide contributed to what took place—essential reading for anyone with a tender conscience and a strong stomach.”

—New Republic

Peter Uvin reveals how aid enterprises reacted—or failed to react—to the 1990s dynamics of militarization and polarization in Rwanda that resulted in mass atrocities. Outlining the profound structural basis on which the genocidal edifice was built, he exposes the practices of inequality, exclusion, and humiliation that were pervasive throughout the country.

Peter Uvin is Henry J. Leir Professor of International Humanitarian Studies at the Fletcher School, Tufts University.

CONTENTS: Rwanda Before Independence: A Contested History. After Independence: Strategies for Elite Consolidation. The Image of Rwanda in the Development Community. Political and Economic Crises and the Radicalization of Society. Under the Volcano: The Development Community in the 1990s. From Structural to Acute Violence. Aid and Structural Violence. And Where Was Civil Society? The Role of Ecological Resources Scarcity. Why Did People Participate in Genocide? A Theoretically Informed Synthesis. Development Aid: Conclusions and Paths for Reflection.
