CHOICE OUTSTANDING ACADEMIC BOOK!

Explaining Successes in Africa:
 Things Don't Always Fall Apart

Erin Accampo Hern

“A masterful study of policy successes in Africa.... This book is much more than a specialized monograph—it is a model for the application of the comparative method.... Highly recommended.”—Choice

“Hern provides a robust analysis of key questions in African politics and development.... Well written and engaging, her book pushes conventional thinking about the region. Students and scholars alike will benefit from its insights.”

—Amy Patterson, University of the South

What does it take for African countries to achieve political and economic successes? Scholarship on Africa tends to focus on the barriers to reaching desired outcomes. While recognizing that these barriers are very real, Erin Hern takes a contrary, unabashedly optimistic approach: rather than treating countries that perform well as “miracles,” she seeks to normalize their success, analyzing the performance of those that have made good choices in the face of adverse circumstances.

Hern shows how most-similar and most-different cases can be used to test major explanatory theories. Making the topic accessible to nonexperts, in each of five issue chapters she highlights two countries that have performed well, evaluates which theories can best explain their successes, and then turns to two shadow cases (countries that have not performed as well) to evaluate whether those theories remain plausible. Including an opening chapter that introduces the theory and methods of comparative politics, this provocative book is ideal for classroom use.

Erin Accampo Hern is associate professor of political science in the Maxwell School, Syracuse University.

Africa's International Relations: Balancing Domestic and Global Interests

Beth Elise Whitaker and John F. Clark

“Brings together a deep appreciation for the region’s historical context with important theoretical insights from the major traditions of international relations theory. This text will be of great value to both students and policymakers eager to understand how African countries relate to each other and the rest of the world.”

—Michael Byron Nelson, Monmouth College

“To explain Africa’s international relations in one book is a daunting challenge, one that the authors have fully met.... I will certainly adopt this book as a required text for my classes.” —Emmanuel Uwalaka, St. Louis University

Comprehensive and engaging, this timely introduction to Africa’s international relations explores how power, interests, and ideas influence interactions both among the continent’s states and between African states and other actors in the global arena.

How has history shaped the international relations of African states and peoples? What role does identity play? How are foreign policies linked to domestic political dynamics, and especially to the pursuit of regime security? How are states grappling with the tensions between sovereignty and external pressures? These are among the questions answered as the authors address a wide range of ongoing and emerging challenges, all in historical and theoretical context. In addition, a case study at the end of each chapter illustrates key concepts and reflects an ongoing debate. The result is an ideal text for students, as well as an invaluable resource for researchers and policymakers.

Beth Elise Whitaker is associate professor of political science at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. John F. Clark is professor of politics and international relations at Florida International University.

Africa's New Global Politics: Regionalism in International Relations

Rita Kiki Edozie and Moses Khisa

“This well-constructed, thoughtful book is highly recommended.” —Choice

“Edozie and Khisa illuminate the agency that Africa exercises in international politics, sharing evidence that the continent’s states are collectively shaping international discourse and policy outcomes.” —Peter Penar, Davidson College

“An important, and persuasive, sustained argument about the role of Africa as both a product and a driver of a new global politics.” —Thomas Tiekou, University of Western Ontario

The African Union’s threat to lead African states’ mass withdrawal from the International Criminal Court in 2008 marked just one of many encounters that demonstrate African leaders’ growing confidence and activism in international relations. Rita Kiki Edozie and Moses Khisa explore the myriad ways in which the continent’s diplomatic engagement and influence in the global arena has been expanding in recent decades.

Focusing in particular on collective action through the institutional platform of the AU—while acknowledging the internal challenges involved—the authors show how Africa’s role as a dynamic world region is both shaping and being shaped by current trends in global development and geopolitics.

Rita Kiki Edozie is professor in the Department of Conflict Resolution, Human

US Policy Toward Africa: Eight Decades of Realpolitik

Herman J. Cohen

"In a time when respectful political discussions are increasingly difficult, Cohen's account gives an honest, if even unflattering, take on history."—Caleb Slayton, The Bridge

"[This] comprehensive political history of US-African relations carefully chronicles American policy on the continent across successive presidencies, from the administration of Franklin Roosevelt to that of Donald Trump."—Nicolas van de Walle, Foreign Affairs

Herman Cohen draws on both the documentary record and his years of on-the-ground experience to provide a uniquely comprehensive survey and interpretation of nearly eight decades of US policy toward Africa.

Tracing how this policy has evolved across successive administrations, covering 1942–2019, Cohen illuminates the debates that have taken place at the highest levels of government; shows how policy toward Africa has been affected over the years by US relations with Europe, the Soviet Union, the Middle East, and most recently China; and points to the increasing reliance of Western economic interests on Africa's natural resources. His deeply informed narrative reveals the roles not only of circumstance and ideology, but also of personalities, in the formulation and implementation of US foreign policy.

Herman J. Cohen was a member of the US Foreign Service for thirty-eight years. He also served as assistant secretary of state for Africa under President George H. W. Bush. He is now president of Cohen and Woods, an international consulting firm.

Adventures in Zambian Politics: A Story in Black and White

Guy Scott

"This excellent book is a revealing account of ... African politics from the inside. It is also a splendid rebuke to those ... who are content or even eager to settle for tabloid understandings of African politicians."
—Calum Fisher, Africa

"Engrossing, entertaining, and packed with insights, wisdom and a dash of humour... This book deserves to become an African classic."
—Michael Holman, former Africa editor, Financial Times

As Miles Larmer writes in the foreword, Adventures in Zambian Politics is unlike any political memoir you have ever read.

It is ... a political history of Zambia from colonial times to the present. A revealing insider account of politics and government within a modern African state. A story about race in Africa. A chronicle of the rise and fall of two improbable political allies who wanted to change Zambian politics: Michael Sata, whose convoluted political career led him to become president in 2011, and Guy Scott, Sata's vice president and, after Sata's death, acting president of Zambia. Not least, it is a pleasure to read.

Guy Scott's absorbing narrative of his career and Michael Sata's in the chaotic world of African politics tells a uniquely Zambian story. But it is also a special contribution to our understanding of democracy and democratization across Africa.

Guy Scott was acting president of Zambia after the death of President Michael Sata. Prior to that he was vice president (2011–2014) and had also served as minister of agriculture and an opposition leader in the Zambian parliament.

3RD EDITION

African Development: Making Sense of the Issues and Actors

Todd J. Moss and Danielle Resnick

Praise for the previous editions:

"Thoughtful, well written ... [This] book leads the student to a deep understanding of the actors at work in Africa's development."

—Barry Riddell, Canadian Journal of Development Studies

"Treating both political and economic themes with admirable clarity, [Moss] walks the reader briskly through Africa's colonial legacy, the syndrome of personal rule, the economic liabilities of conflict, and the challenges of democratic reform.... Provides a thorough and critical but fair-minded treatment in a style that is plainspoken and often witty."—Peter Lewis, Foreign Affairs

Both authoritative and accessible, African Development introduces the issues, actors, and institutions at play in development trajectories across sub-Saharan Africa. It uniquely brings to life the collective impact of history, economics, and politics on development in the region.

Todd J. Moss is senior fellow at the Center for Global Development and nonresident scholar at Rice University's Baker Institute and the Payne Institute at the Colorado School of Mines. Danielle Resnick is senior research fellow in the Development Strategy and Governance Division of the International Food Policy Research Institute.
